2017 Literary Calligraphy Calendar: 20th Annual Susan Loy

Susan Loy's 20th annual Literary Calligraphy calendar is a retrospective of her art, 1997-2017. She begins with the language of flowers in the 1990s and ends with geometric quantum physics-inspired art from 2016. The calendar includes her historic White House poster, popular designs, including "Love Is Patient," and nine others that survey the changing styles and motifs that Susan Loy has brought to modern calligraphy. Loy describes the calendar: "January presents Emily Dickinson's "The Lilac Is an Ancient Shrub," which I painted in the late 1980s. February salutes Valentine's Day with the version of 1 Corinthians 13, "Love Is Patient," that I created about 1997. March features Robert Frost's "The Road Not Taken," from about 1998. April presents "The White House Easter Egg Roll, 1878-1998," which I created for the White House in 1998-99 as part of my duties as "Artist on the Lawn," a tradition that dates back prior to photography. May celebrates wild flowers with Henry David Thoreau. June features the traditional "Irish Blessing" from about 2003. The color wheel is one of my favorite themes, featured in July. My husband and I share an August wedding anniversary with our niece and nephew, so I chose the "Apache Blessing," created about 2006, to celebrate all anniversaries. "Article 3: Justice," created about 2008, is from my Constitution series. October features "The Flowers of the Month," created about 2009. My interpretation of Kipling's inspirational poem, "If," from about 2010 is shown in November. December features the newest in my Higgs Boson Series, "Four Leptons," created in 2015." Each month displays a different full-page image on the top, with a full-page monthly grid below that includes past and future months, lunar phases, holidays, and quotations from writers on their birthdays or from their journals. We produce the entire calendar in-house and have it printed on heavy, glossy paper by Bison Printing in Bedford County, Virginia. Made in USA.
