Wood Veneers And Laminated Plastics: Past Present And Future James Duggan

The original publication was designed and written to draw comparisons between the use of wood veneer and laminated plastics in the manufacture of domestic furniture. It discusses in layman's terms the production methods of both from the raw materials. It goes on to describe how they are applied in the fabrication process. Finally, it looks at the wider implications and draws conclusions from their continued use at an ever increasing rate in a worldwide consumer culture.
