Seven Years Campaigning in the Peninsula and the Netherlands 1808-1815, Vol. II Sir Richard D. Henegan

In August 1808, Sir Richard D. Henegan landed in Portugal as part of the British army sent to stop the French invasion of the Iberian Peninsula and put an end to Napoleon's Imperial ambitions. As a Military Commissary and later Ordnance Commissary in the Field Train, whose job was to transport and maintain the artillery and ammunition, Henegan offers an insight into the war from an unusual viewpoint. He provides a vivid and particularly human account of life in the army, describing not only the dangers of fighting the enemy, but also the highs and lows of everyday existence for the soldier in Wellington's army. From initial setbacks and the threat of destruction at the hands of unhappy peasants to the triumph of the famous victory at the Battle of Waterloo, Seven Years Campaigning is an involving and compelling account of one Englishman's Napoleonic War. This is the second volume of two, which covers from just after the Battle of Vittoria to the Battle of Waterloo and Restoration of Louis XVIII.
